

Unconditional Basic Income is a public monetary payment which people receive as follows:

individually because the individual, not some bureaucratic entity, is the bearer of human rights without means-testing because means-testing in an office always causes some people in need being prevented from it without compulsory work requirement because force prohibits creativity and productivity high enough to ensure existence and participation because only if people have no fear of material survival, they can fully unfold their potential and possibilities for everyone living here because there can't be two sets of rules for people living in the same place.
